The Wolf & the Crane

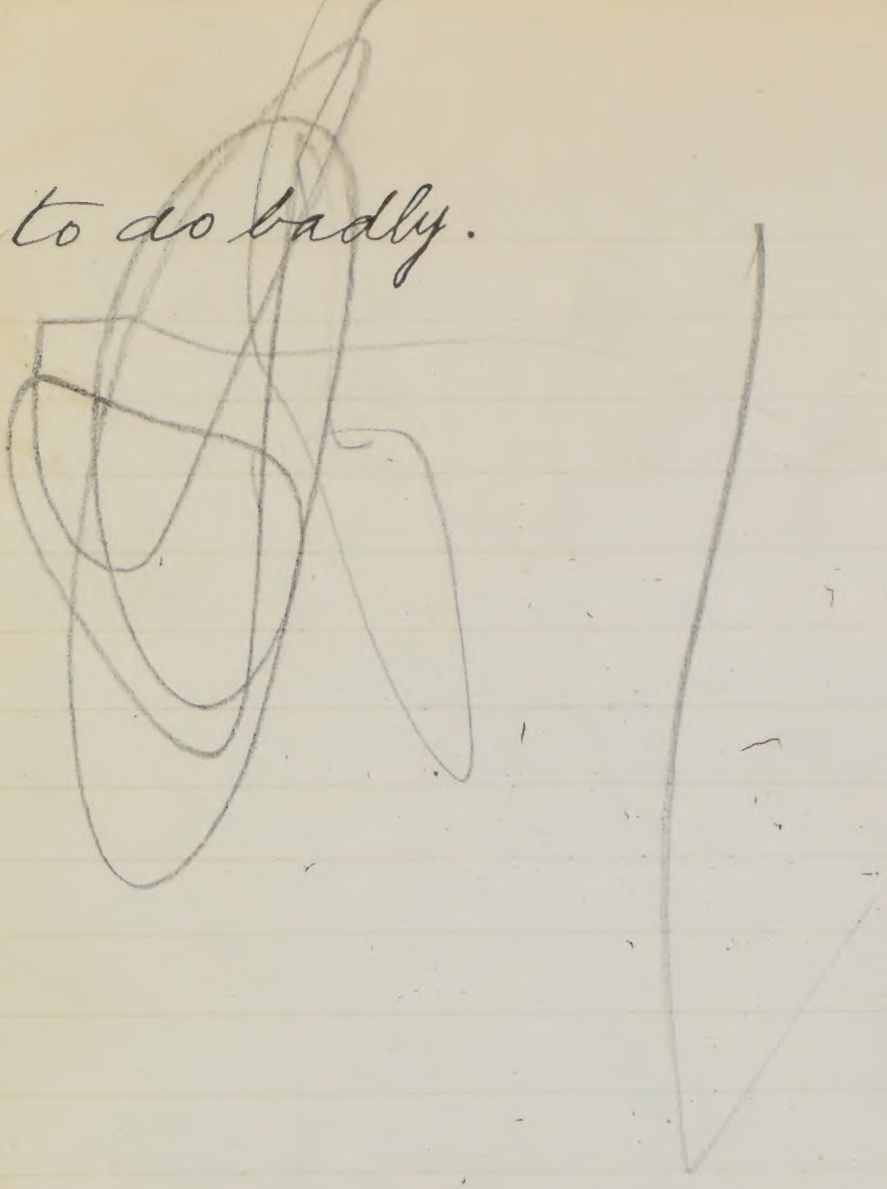
105. A bone had stuck in the ~~[illegible]~~ throat of a wolf. Therefore he hired a crane by reward to remove it. This the crane easily effected by the length of his neck. But when he claimed his reward the wolf smiling & gnashing his teeth said, Dost it seem a small reward to have drawn thy neck safe from the jaws of a wolf.

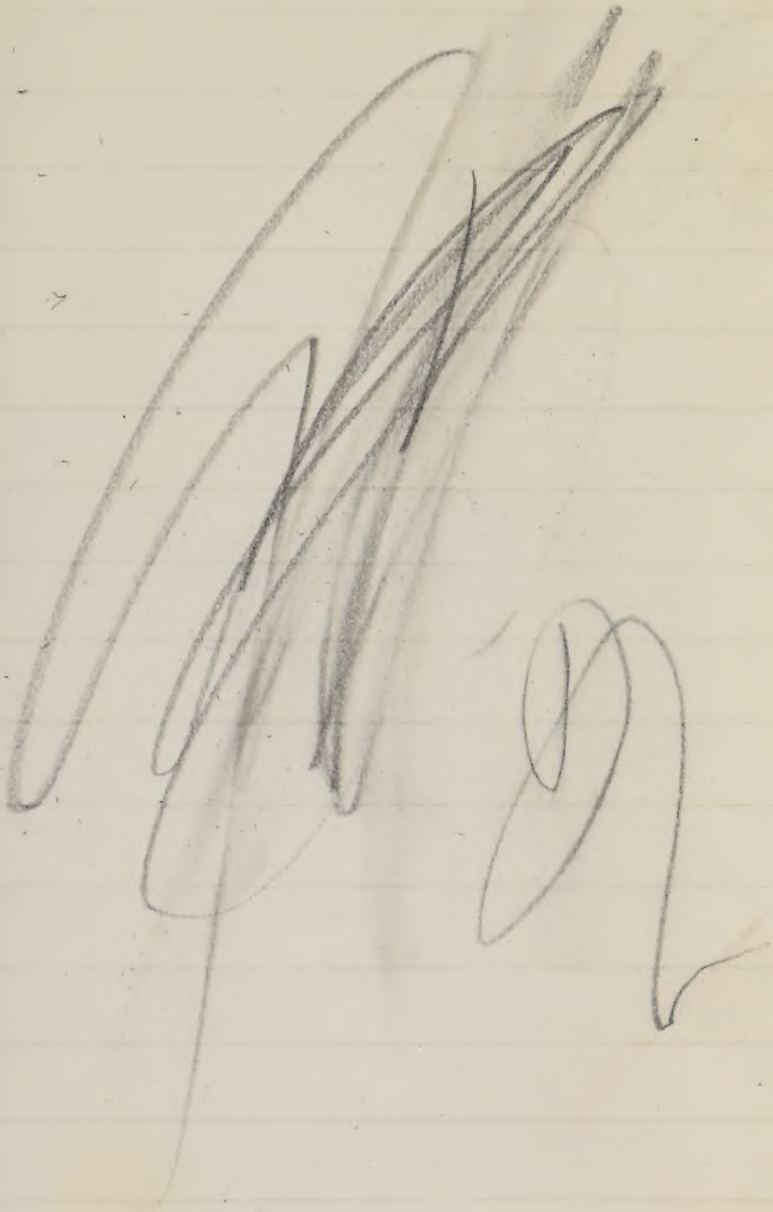
The Trumpeter

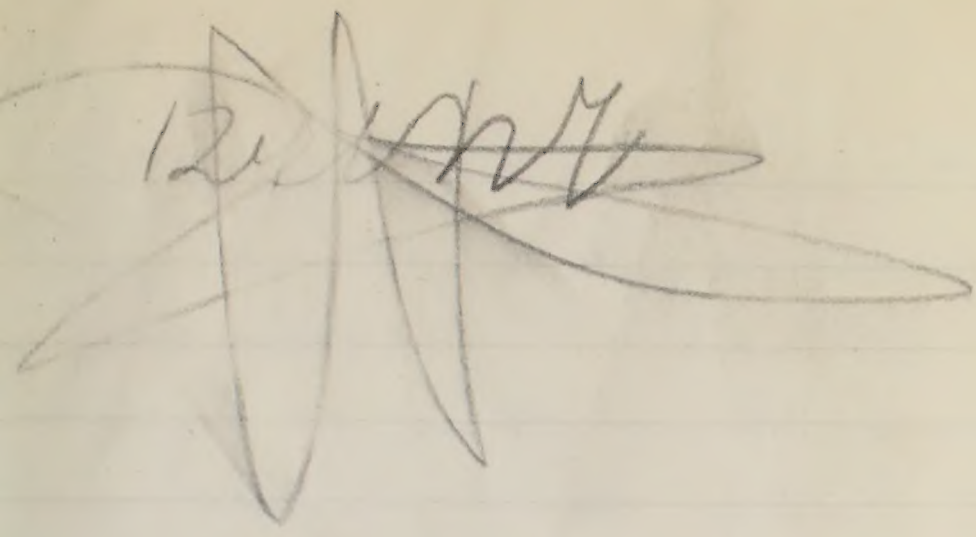
A trumpeter being taken by the enemy said, "Do not kill me; for I am unarmed, nor have I anything besides this trumpet." But the enemy said "For that very reason we will kill thee, who, though thou mayst be ignorant of war itself, art accustomed to incite others to battle.

The fable teaches, not only evil doing is to be punished, but also those are to be punished who excite others to

to do badly.







Roman History.

Early Italian Kings.- Aneas

148. Saturn is ~~called the ancient king~~ said to have into Italy in the most un

Aneas the son of Anchises, with ma Trojans, who had escaped the sw of the Grecians, fled and ca into Italy. Then Latinus the king kindly received him gave him his daughter Lavinia marriage. Aeneas founded a c which he called Lavinium in honor of his wife.

Ascanius and the Kings of Alba 50. Ascanius after the death of Aeneas Aeneas' son accepted the kingdom. He removed the seat of the kingdom to another place, and founded a city on Mount Albanus and called it Alba Longa. Silvius followed him who was begat from Lavinia after the death of Aeneas.
All his descendants reigned in Alba, even to the founding of Rome.
51. Silvius Procas, the king of the Albans, left two sons, Numitor and Amulius. Of these Amulius the younger Amulius gave his brother the choice whether he would have the kingdom or the property which his father had left. Numitor took the property of his father; Amulius obtained the kingdom.

Birth of Romulus and Remus

152. Amulius, that he might possess the strongest kingdom, killed the son Numitor by treachery, and m the daughter of his brother, Rhea Silvia, a vestal vi For the priestesses of Vesta w not allowed to marry. Bu she brought forth two sons Mars, Romulus & Remus.

When Amulius found th out, he threw the mother int chains, but ordered the boys to be thrown into the Tiber.

153. By chance the waters of the Tiber had over flowed its banks, and, when the boys w thrown into a shallow place, the w flowing back left them dry. A wolf hastened to their cries and nourished them by her mil Caesar. 15. [illegible] 1873.

All Gaul is divided in to three parts, one of which is called Belgae, another Aquitani, the third which in their own language is called Celtae, is called Gaul in ours.
They all differ from one another in languages, customs and laws. The river Garonne divides the Gauls from the Aquitanians, the Matrona & Sequana divide Belgae from them.
